Love and Trust

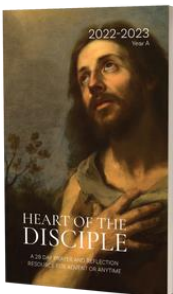

The reading has two parts: part one is about the power of faith, and part two is about the responsibility of Jesus' disciples. Having faith in Jesus means loving and trusting Him. Love and trust belong to the invisible sphere, and what is unseeable is immeasurable and unscaleable. It is rather hard to talk about love and trust in terms of their quality or quantity, because the metric of love and trust is the language of one's heart. It is the same for faith. We can't describe faith in terms of its quality or quantity, but rather to have a strong or weak faith. Faith in this sense is manifested through the love and service we have for others. In following Jesus, the disciples recognised the challenges of the new way of life. They asked Jesus to increase their faith in Him, in the hope that they would be able to be faithful to the call. His reply was less about the quality of faith but more about the power of faith. He told them that with a tiny faith they have, they can do amazing things beyond their expectations. Jesus told them that by having faith in Him, everything is possible. Something is impossible for us, but for God everything is possible. When Jesus' disciples achieve any great thing, they know that they are not doing it alone, but rather the power of faith in Jesus working through them. God will do great things in a person who trusts and loves God, even when his faith is not great. Faithful disciples are the ones who live and move with God and depend on God in this life and the eternal life to come. We depend on God so much, apart from giving thanks to God, we have nothing to be proud of or claim for.

The second part of the Gospel talks about the duty of Jesus' disciples. Jesus employed the image of a worker whose duty is to work both in a field and domestic work, and that is His expectation of him. At the spiritual level, the image reminds us that each of us is being sent to be witnesses for Jesus by serving others. This kind of work needs to be done in a prayerful spirit, because without constant prayer to care for our inner life, the good work we do for others may become a source of self-praise. This self-gratification is dangerous because it opens the door widely for pride to creep in. The evidence is the feeling that one deserves to be praised and acknowledged for the good work they have done. Jesus reminds His disciples that they have nothing to be proud of because they are just simply doing their job.

In reality, a good reward is in the job itself. When a worker works with love, that person enjoys the work and may gain some insight into doing the work. The greatest satisfaction in doing the work is the completion of the work on time. There is a sense of relief, relaxation, and freedom from pressure. It is a greater reward and a feeling of self-worth and achievement.

Jesus' disciples also know that they are not doing the work alone but do it with Jesus. He is the power and force that strengthens them in their work. He is the mind and heart of the work. They thank Him for trusting and asking them to take part in His plan of salvation. When we see that God is the power and strength and wisdom in our work then we would never claim any credit for the work, but rather give thanks to God (Common Preface IV). We also acknowledge that giving thanks to God is a gift itself. Because there is no credit gained, then there will be no reward. We help others not because our faith is strong but rather because acts of charity may strengthen our faith in God.

Heart of the Disciple

“Heart of the Disciple” is a new 28-day reflection resource that can be used by individuals or groups, during Advent or at any time during the 2022-2023 liturgical year. Its main purpose is to help us to find a few minutes each day to practice what it means to sit with God and to trust God to lead us forward. In the way that John the Baptist announced the coming of something new, giving people hope and offering them healing, we are to live lives that inspire others to reach out to God. To do this, we must learn what it means to have the ‘heart of a disciple’ – increasingly open to hearing and responding to God. When we learn to put the time aside each day to allow God to teach us who he is and how he communicates with us. Each day’s reflection is inspired by a short text of scripture, and concludes with a thought or two to take away and with a prayer. Cost is $5, contact the office to pre-order

Rite of Catholic Initiation of Adults

For everyone wishing to learn more about our faith and be received into full Communion with the Catholic Church, we are planning to start the RCIA in early November. The program is a modified catechumenate leading to the celebration of Baptism, Confirmation & First Holy Communion at Easter.

Please contact the office.

WEEKLY INFORMATION

27th Sunday of Ordinary Time

“For God did not give us a spirit of cowardice but rather of power and love and self-control.” 2 Timothy 1:7

Many of us compartmentalize our Faith, we bring it out only when we attend Mass or when we attend a parish event. Being a good steward requires discipline and striving to put God first in everything - all the time. The next time you are at a neighbourhood party or at work or out shopping, would your words and actions signal to others that you are a good and faithful servant of our Lord? Every day, in little ways and in big ways, God asks, “Whom shall I send?” Whether it is someone to take on a new ministry, to give a friendly smile to a stranger or to say a word of encouragement to a friend, God constantly provides opportunities to help someone in need. God is always talking to us; we just need to pay more attention. When you hear God calling have the courage to walk through the door and say “Here I am, Lord.”
